PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

Fellow-Citizens of the Senate and House of Representatives:

We owe devout gratitude to the bountiful Giver of all good for congratulation on the general prosperity and regular season with which our country has been blessed during the past year, and the abundant harvests and high prices of staples have recently return the prospective to complete and hasten the payment of the indebtedness of the country, and to restore the currency to a specie basis, and put the finances of the country on a healthy condition. The industrial interests have been the most seriously affected by the financial revulsion, and while it is to be expected that the most energetic and skillful will first recover from the disaster, it is a matter of congratulation that the general condition of business is so much improved. The revival of commerce, the increased demand for and better price of our products, the more hopeful condition of the money market, and the fact that our manufacturing industries are again in full operation, are evidences that the country is recovering from the effects of the financial crisis of 1873, and that we may hope for a speedy return to a healthy condition of business.

The receipts of the Treasury have been sufficient to meet the expenditures of the Government, and to maintain the public credit at a high standard. The revenue from all sources during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, were $281,408,678.76, and the expenditures for the same period were $267,948,316.71, leaving a surplus revenue of $13,460,362.05. The estimates of revenue for the present fiscal year, upon the existing internal revenue laws, are $290,000,000, and the estimated expenditures are $265,000,000, including the sum required for the payment of the interest on the public debt, the sinking fund, the payment of the Texas indemnity, and the expenses of the War Department for the suppression of Indian hostilities, leaving a surplus revenue of $25,000,000 to be applied to the payment of the principal of the public debt. The receipts for the first quarter of the present fiscal year have been $73,000,000, and the expenditures for the same period have been $64,000,000, leaving a surplus revenue of $9,000,000. The receipts from internal revenue have been less than the estimates, and there is every indication that the revenue from all sources will be less than the estimates, unless Congress shall modify the laws so as to increase the revenue. The attention of Congress is again invited to the necessity of some modification of the laws relating to the internal revenue, with a view to increasing the revenue from that source, and to the fact that the revenue from customs is now collected on less than one-half of our dutiable imports, the remainder being admitted at the reduced rate of duty imposed by the act of March 3, 1875, while the expenses of collecting the customs revenue are almost as great as when all imports were subjected to the full rate of duty. The attention of Congress is also again invited to the fact that the sinking fund provided for by the act of February 25, 1873, is inadequate to the payment of the 5-20 bonds of 1867 and 1868 at their maturity, and to the fact that the 4-per-cent bonds issued under the act of January 14, 1875, are not available for the purpose of the sinking fund provided for by the act of February 25, 1873, except to the small amount of about $15,000,000 per annum. The attention of Congress is also again invited those States and in all the States, and having already invited your attention to the needs of the District of Columbia, with respect to its public school system, I here add that I believe it desirable not to much with reference to the local wants of the District, but to the great and lasting benefit of the entire country that this system should be crowned with a university in all respects in keeping with the National Capital and thereby realize the cherished hopes of Washington on this subject.

THE SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTE AND LIBRARIES.

I also earnestly commend the request of the regents of the Smithsonian Institute, that an adequate appropriation be made for the establishment and conduct of a National Museum under their supervision. The request of providing for the preservation and growth of the Library of Congress is also of National importance. As the depository of all copyright publications and records, this Library has outgrown the provisions for its accommodations, and the erection on such a site as the judgment of Congress may approve of a fire-proof building to preserve the rapidly enlarging usefulness of the valuable collection is recommended. I recommend also such legislation as will render suitable and efficient for the purpose of instruction, so far as is consistent with the public service, the cabinets or museum of the inventions of surgery, of education and of agriculture and other collections, the property of the National Government.

The Capitol of the Nation should be something more than a mere political center. We should avail ourselves of all the opportunities which Providence has here placed at our command to promote the general intelligence of the people and increase the conditions most favorable to the success and perpetuity of our institutions.

R. B. HAYES.

THE MESSAGE.

The President's Message is so voluminous that it leaves further time nor space for extended comment in this issue. While it embraces a great variety of routine topics and contains some reasonable suggestions of a general nature, we frankly state that the document so far as it represents the National policy of the Executive, meets our emphatic disapproval. The President evinces a determination to blindly ride his pet "policies," regardless of the humiliating failure thus far achieved, and of the disasters threatened by his systematic efforts to conciliate the disloyal and disorderly elements of our politics by antagonizing and disintegrating the Republican Party which elected him.

We regard his reference to his "Southern Policy" as disingenuous and evasive. Having made that "policy" the distinctive feature of his Administration, the country was certainly warranted in expecting that his Message to Congress would recount, and, if possible, justify the extraordinary events of the past year in which his "policy" has borne so conspicuous a part. Instead thereof we have only a stubborn reiteration of his faith in what has proved a measurably series of blunders, and a felicitation upon the changed establishment of harmony and justice, which in the light of notorious facts and recent political developments, read like a ghastly burlesque.

We can have no patience in discussing such wild assertions, as that the violent overthrow of legal State Governments in the South has been succeeded by the spirit of mutual forbearance and a hearty patriotism interest, "and we can only marvel at the assurance or infatuation which enables the President to declare to the American people that by the trampling down of law and justice in the South, "There has been a general re-establishment of order and of the orderly administration of justice." This, just at the close of a desperate struggle in the Senate which has resulted in the admission of a chief of assassins, whose immunity for his crimes is due to the action of the President in arresting the arm of National retribution, by orders issued at the request of Wade Hampton, stopping the prosecution of South Carolina outlaws and murderers in the United States Court. This, after a Democratic attempt to corruptly oust control of the higher branch of Congress with such hostile and dangerous intent that the President marshalled his most zealous supporters to prevent it, although in so doing they repudiated the legitimate results of his policy."

We hardly know what to think when the President of the United States can calmly "congratulate" the people upon the establishment of a condition of affairs in which the dominion upon thousands of loyal citizens constituting vast majorities in States of Cis-Union are absolutely and notoriously deprived of all political rights and subjected to the most merciless persecution without protection or redress. In one sentence the President asserts that the withdrawal of troops from States where they were needed to protect the lawful government from actual revolution was "a Constitutional duty and requirement" and in another he declares that he responded to a Constitutional duty in sending troops to aid in suppressing railroad rioting in certain other States! The logic of this would be that assaults upon property present a stronger basis for intervention of the National power than those assaults upon the "State" which are expressly mentioned in the Constitution.

But it would be fruitless to discuss the President's treatment of this subject, since he carefully avoids mention or defense of specific acts. He could not well recount occurrences in Louisiana, without colliding diametrically with the recent verdict of the Senate that "an overwhelming array of armed and organized military force was used to destroy and crush out the lawful State Government of Louisiana." So he avoids uncomfortable details, but with that "amiable stubbornness" which his courtiers so admire, he insists in general terms that the transaction thus described was highly laudable and that the results "are indeed significant and encouraging." On the finances the President uses a great many words to say very little. We are glad to know that he favors a return to specie payments, although he does not touch upon the practical issue now raised in the attempt to repeal the resumption law. On the silver question he is not very clear, although he declares for remonetization in some form. He deprecates the application of silver to our bonded debt, however, and for that much we may be thankful. The silver part of the Message suggests to us a desire to placate the advocates of various doctrines rather than familiarity with or decided convictions upon the subject.

We have hastily jotted down a few of our impressions, and without further comment we refer our readers to the document which they can peruse and judge for themselves.

HAMBURGH BUTLER.

The Commercial has selected the following extract from a letter occupying more than a column in the Boston Advertiser and thus presents it to its readers to convey the impression that the article was favorable to the Hamburgh Butcher:

The Washington correspondent of the Boston Advertiser thus writes of the new Senator Butler of South Carolina:

"Butler is now about 45 or 46 years old, of distinguished personal appearance, with the imperious Southern manner born and bred with him, and the martial air acquired by years of camp and command. His complexion is florid, his hair and moustache iron gray, his address pleasant and courtly, and in speech he is at once easy and elegant. The family nobility and the pride of lineage are all there in full presence, and all justified."

The Commercial man used his scissors very carefully, as the words of the letter directly following the last word quoted above were these:

Giving nature and inheritance their full due, it should be in justice said that Gen. Butler has not attained in his practice preeminent distinction beyond the average country lawyers of South Carolina. His natural ability is not large, nor have his intellectual abilities in the line of his profession or outside of it, been conspicuous. That he is popular in his State and locality is inevitable, and from a variety of causes.

Here in Washington General Butler is familiarly known as "Hamburgh" Butler, and as his seat in the Senate, when he gets it, and his present prominence before the country, are doubtless owing mainly to the affair which occurred at Hamburg, S. C., last year, some account of that transaction may be in order.

The writer then goes on to give a detailed and authentic account of the horrible work at Hamburgh under the direction of Butler, the final scene of which is thus thrillingly portrayed:

About two o'clock in the morning the horrid butchery began. The first victim was A. T. Attaway, a young colored man of 31, first lieutenant of the company, commissioner of Aiken county, who was taken a little distance apart, and despite his earnest entreaties and his prayers for his life, shot in cold blood. After him, David Phillips, Pompey Curry, Albert Minyard, Moses Parks and Hampton Stevens were called out, one by one, and shot like dogs. In the cool gray of this Sabbath morning, these six young American citizens were there cruelly and savagely slaughtered for no offence, without trial, without sentence, without prayer and without mercy.

The writer then refers to Butler's attempted denial and says:

Butler denies his responsibility for the massacre, but Senator Angus Cameron's committee, which last winter made thorough investigation of the affair and all the circumstances leading to it, will soon report, and will place upon Butler the blame and the guilt of this bloody transaction.—Hear, too, what unimpeached and undiscredited witnesses, participants and survivors of the fearful night say of Butler and his presence there.

The pamphlet and overwhelming testimony of Butler's leadership is that most severe it cited by the writer, and the letter then concludes by showing the fraudulency of his claim to a seat in the Senate, as follows:

If Butler's right to a seat among the Senators of the United States was not denied by the Hamburg slaughter, in the name of humanity and civilization, the method and circumstances of his election would seem to vitiate his title. I will not here relate the tale of the jungle following the South Carolina election last November. Two facts are prominent and demonstrated by the record—that on the 12th of December, David T. Corbin was elected United States Senator for the term of six years from March 4, 1877, by a legal and duly-elected Legislature according to all the forms of the statute, and that his credentials were on the following day signed by Governor Chamberlain, Governor then in full and undisputed authority, by virtue of election nearly two years before and subsequently subsequent exercise of his official functions. It would seem, therefore, that no vacancy for occasion existed for anybody, legislative or other, to elect a Senator for the same term to which Mr. Corbin had been duly chosen and commissioned. Eight days after—December 20th—a body of seventy-nine men, calling themselves the House of Representatives of South Carolina, not one of whom claimed to be a senator or to represent the Senate, and eight of whom had no credentials of commission to show that they were ever legally elected to either branch, calling in spectators, a quorum of the entire 135 senators and 124 representatives, proceeded to elect General M. C. Butler United States Senator for the same term for which Mr. Corbin had been commissioned, and out of this state of facts he bases his legal claim to the seat. Thus far, to the credit of the Republican Senators, the only ones who have expressed themselves satisfied with even the formal and technical points in Butler's favor sustaining the regularity of this election are Patterson and Conover. He does not pretend, nor do any of his advocates, that he ever received the vote of a single state senator, or that the South Carolina Senate participated in any manner in his election. Mr. D. T. Corbin, who contests Butler's seat, is a native of Vermont, a graduate of Dartmouth, and when the war broke out left a law practice at Wells River, Vt., for that great. Disabled in the field the following year, he served on special duty until the close of the war, and after peace was sent South in connection with the Freedmen's Bureau. In 1866 he was appointed United States District Attorney for South Carolina, and his record in that office is a part of the current public history. It is that of an able lawyer, a courageous, independent Republican, and an upright man. H. L. B.

We are sorry that the Commercial failed to quote these most important and interesting portions of the letter of that "Washington correspondent of the Boston Advertiser."

PERISTALTIC LOZENGES.

The effects of

COSTIVENESS

When long continued are painful in the last degree, resulting in weakness of the stomach, symptoms of dyspepsia in the abdominal region, congestion of the liver, and hence an impeded circulation. Cured by these celebrated Lozenges.

PILES.

The grandpa vinnata cause of Dyspepsia is the bilious or dead-much. The regularity of the liver is important from the small quantity of the bile secreted from that organ, and also by a bad state of the digestive tube. Under whichever form

DYSPEPSIA

Any case there is always languor or debility, even after fatigue, the pulse is weak, the sight dim, the head, the extremities cold, the tongue for the most part furred or covered with a creamy mucous coat in the morning. No person with a constipated or irregular state of the bowels can be robust health.

It is evident, that some gentle laxative, slightly stimulant to the mucous membrane of the intestines, joined with a tonic, that increases the secretions of the liver and gradually strengthens the stomach, must be a reasonable combination and reach the case. That this combination will do, for proof of which we are happy to be able to refer those heretofore disappointed, to the most reliable physicians, who have long used this remedy in their practice, and also to every apothecary by whom the Peristaltic Lozenges are sold.

These Lozenges will supply the place of those by the excessive use of those "Liver Pills," which the country has for years been a victim.

They are so agreeable to the taste, and convenient in form, that children can take them readily after rejecting the most nauseous remedies. In fever symptoms supposed to indicate the presence of Worms, they are a proper remedy.

Price 50 and 90 cents. For sale by druggists, or by mail, on receipt of price in P. O. stamps or money.

The New Orleans Collectorship

A paper was addressed to the President today signed by numerous Republicans in Congress asking him to appoint ex-Governor Packard Collector for the port of New Orleans

Suspended Officers Reinstated.

It is understood the Attorney General has rendered an opinion that the Senate in extra session to confirm the new officers appointed in place of old officers suspended virtually reinstates, until further action of the appointing power, the officers suspended, and instructions to this effect have been transmitted by the Secretary of the Treasury to some of the officers in question. There are cases in Virginia, Louisiana, and other Southern States, which may come under this ruling but this cannot according to the best information be said has been practically applied only to the Texas cases. The only bills that became laws during the late extra session of Congress were the Army appropriation bill for the current year and the Navy deficiency bill

Ellaismons' Confirmation

In executive session to-day the Senate on motion of Mr Conkling removed the injunction of secrecy from the vote by which the nomination of Owen I Fitzsimmons was confirmed

A PONDEROUS TELEGRAPHIC DESPATCH A striking illustration of the capabilities of the electric telegraph is afforded by the representation this morning of the text of the President's Message filling over eight solid columns of our space, every word of which was telegraphed from Washington after the delivery of the document to Congress yesterday afternoon — The transmission required the use of two wires between Boston and the city during yesterday afternoon and late into the evening, and we are doubtful if the creditable argument and valued courtesy of Charles L Bliss Esq Manager of the Western Union office and his efficient corps of assistants for the prompt and care will which the great mass of work was transmitted and put in type, almost impossible to rush a chain lightning message of matter over several wires from Washington to New York then on to Boston and thence to Bangor without seriously confusing the text It would think there will be comparatively few errors found in the document as printed by us elsewhere

THE BOHEMIAN GIRL

As Presented by the Boston English Opera Company

A crowded house greeted the appearance of the Boston English Opera Company in Bohemian Girl evening in the popular combination of melodies Bohemian Girl which was presented in excellent style to the company delight of the several hundred familiar from the frequent repetition of its charming music It is commonly said and has first and number of singers usually brought their popularity The company very effective and pleasing especially as being worn by a delightful horn obligato in one of the interludes The principal roles were admirably performed and the chorus was made up of excellent voices well trained and full of life Mr Barnes as Count Arnheim Queen Ottoka warm choice in their acting and singing did ample justice to their parts Her admirable rendering of the song Bliss For evermore called before the curtain and demanded a repetition that was given with equally fine effect Miss Stone the heroine of the piece was in most admirable voice and appearance creditably a very fine piece of singing especially the duet with the Count and we all speak in terms of commendation of her unusually good merit

THEORIES ABOUT MARS.

The land regions of Mars can be distinguished from the sea by their ruddy color, the seas being greenish. But here, perhaps, you will be disposed to ask how astronomers can be sure that the greenish regions are seas, the ruddy regions land, the white spots either snow or cloud. Might not materials altogether unlike any we are acquainted with exist from that remote planet? The spectroscope answers this question in the clearest way. You know that astronomers have learned that the vapor of water exists in the atmosphere of Venus. The same method has been applied, even more satisfactorily, to the planet of war, and it has been found that he also has his atmosphere at times laden with moisture. This being so, it is clear we have not to do with a planet made of materials utterly unlike those forming our earth. For suppose so, when we find that the air of Mars, formed like our own, (for if it contained other gases the spectroscope would discover them) contains often large quantities of the vapor of water, would be as absurd as to believe in the green-cheese theory of the moon, or in another equally preposterous, advanced lately by an English artist—Mr J. Brett—to the effect that the atmosphere of Venus is formed of glass. There is another theory about Mars, certainly not so absurd as either of these last named, but scarcely supported by evidence at present—the idea, namely, advanced by a French astronomer, that the ruddy color of the lands and seas of Mars is due to red trees and a generally scarlet vegetation. Your poet Holmes refers to this in those lines of his, "Star-clouds and Wind-clouds," (to my mind, among the most charming of his many charming poems:)

"This shows that lichens, on the disk of Mars
Have mulled, and the planet's dusky orb
Holds on the summer sunrise of its year."

It is quite possible, of course, that such colors as are often seen in America in woods in the Autumn time may prevail in the forests and vegetation of Mars during the Autumn of the Martian Summer. The fact that during this season that the planet looks redder than usual in some degree corresponds with this theory. But it is much better explained, to my mind, by the greater clearness of the Martian air in the Summer time. That would enable us to see the color of the soil better. If our earth were looked at from Venus during Winter time, the snows covering large parts of her surface, and the clouds and mists common in the Winter months, would hide the tints of the surface, whereas these would be very distinct in clear Summer weather. I feel my own conclusion about Mars is that his present condition is very desolate. I look on the ruddiness of him to which I have referred as one of the signs that the planet of war has long since passed its prime. There are lands and seas in Mars, the vapor of water is present in his air, clouds form, rains and snows fall upon his surface, and doubtless brooks and rivers irrigate his soil, and carry down the moisture collected on his wide continents to the seas whence the clouds had originally been formed. But I do not think there is much vegetation on Mars, or that many living creatures of the higher types of Martian life as it once existed still remain. All that is known about the planet tends to show that the time when it attained that stage of planetary existence through which our earth is now passing must be at millions of years, perhaps hundreds of millions of years ago. He has not yet, indeed, reached that airless and waterless condition, that extremity of intense cold, or, in fact, that other untenable support any kind of life, which would seem to prevail in the moon.—St. Nicholas.

Everything great is not always good, but all good things are great.
